City scores tournament

Ottawa to host 2013 World Women's Hockey along with the provincial junior tournament Events will contribute $35 million to local economy: Mayor Jim Watson

The International Ice Hockey Federation (IIHF) World Women's Championship is coming to Ottawa along with a provincial minor hockey tournament, thousands of players and fans and millions of dollars in economic benefits.

"It's going to create a lot of jobs and a lot of economic activity for the city," said Mayor Jim Watson, at a press conference at Scotiabank Place, where he and officials from Hockey Canada, the Ontario Women's Hockey Association (OWHA) and the Ottawa Senators announced the tournaments will arrive in the capital April 2-9, 2013.

"It impacts so many young girls. These athletes playing at the worlds are their role models, so we're bringing the provincial championship into Ottawa so they can share the joy of being part of the World Championship," said OWHA president Fran Rider.

Baird faces tough terrain as foreign minister

John Baird may be Canada's new top diplomat, but that won't prevent Stephen Harper's favourite political pitbull from baring his teeth on the international stage from time to time.

Baird's promotion to Foreign Affairs in yesterday's cabinet announcement was taken as a sign by some that one of the prime minister's fiercest partisans would have to muzzle his growl and demur to the niceties of international diplomacy.

But Baird showed no sign of an impending personality makeover when he characterized his new job in confrontational terms as he left Rideau Hall.

"I fight hard for what I believe in," Baird said, firing off freedom, democracy, human rights and the rule of law as examples of those beliefs.

Some of the Harper's strongest foreign policy critics applauded the selection of Baird, citing his tough, non-compromising style as a perfect fit for his new job. But they also warned of a tough road ahead in elevating what they view as Canada's sunken standing on the international stage.

Harper unveils his biggest cabinet yet

Prime Minister boosts size cabinet to 39, tying it with biggest ever

Stephen Harper unveiled the first cabinet of his majority government yesterday, sticking mainly with familiar faces and promising to make the economy his No. 1 priority.

That brought immediate cries of hypocrisy from critics who slammed Harper for boosting the size of cabinet while moving forward with an austerity program to cut billions of dollars in government spending.

But Harper dismissed the criticism.

"I think it's important to know when you're talking about austerity, that this government has reduced ministerial budgets significantly," he said.

"So the question here is not cost, the question is making sure that we have a ministry that is broad, representative of the country and tries to use people's talents to the maximum."

The man guiding the nation's finances, Jim Flaherty, is among the veterans staying in their posts, along with Defence Minister Peter MacKay.

In one of the biggest moves, Tory stalwart John Baird becomes the country's top diplomat as foreign affairs minister, replacing Lawrence Cannon, who was defeated in the May 2 election. Peter Van Loan takes over from Baird as government House leader.

In another big switch, Tony Clement leaves the industry portfolio to become treasury board president, and Christian Paradis takes over his old job. Clement faces the chal"Any hockey coach will tell you that if a team is going to keep winning over time, it must maintain a corps of veterans and then gradually blend in new talent."

Bus route changes: Round 3

OC Transpo has announced 17 tweaks to the bus-route changes that take effect this fall.

"We think we're now fixed on where the bus routes are going to run," said Pat Scrimgeour, manager of transit service design, adding that it may still be possible to extend service hours.

For the most part, the changes are service extensions. For example, there will be special Sunday service on Route 118 to access church on Prince of Wales Drive north of Heron Road.

The only route cancellation announced was Route 165 in Kanata. But other route additions in the area, including Route 68, will make up for the loss, Scrimgeour said. • JESSICA SMITH

Full-time students who aren't eligible for special transit rates will have to wait another year for the chance of a discount.

Students at some private colleges that aren't registered with the Ontario Student Assistance Program aren't eligible for student fares. OC Transpo eyeing O-Train expansion

Transit board will 'find the money' to increase service

After massive cost-cutting at OC Transpo, the transit commission is looking at making O-Train service more frequent and expanding it farther south.

The commission also wants a feasibility study on expanding the line as far as Riverside South. Expanding south would give rapid transit access to "underserviced" communities, Coun. Diane Deans said yesterday.

"The very earliest we could get service to Riverside South is 2026, and I think, realistically, it would be much later than that," she said. "For probably not that much more money, we could take the O-Train all the way to Riverside South and effectively provide light rapid-transit service to that community within the next few years, as opposed to two decades off."

Deans' motion came after OC Transpo general manager Alain Mercier told commissioners yesterday the city could see more frequent service along the current O-Train route by 2014, at a cost of $59 million.

Mercier said the $59-million price tag would be covered by current city accounts, in part by reducing the need to buy more

BIXI bikes here, so are viability questions

The National Capital Commission finally unveiled Capital BIXI in Ottawa yesterday, but not without facing questions about its profitability after the city of Montreal bailed out the bike-sharing program on Tuesday.

City council in Montreal approved a $37-million loan package to cover BIXI's deficit, and $71 million in loan guarantees to help BIXI branch out to other markets. Alain Ayotte, the president of the company behind BIXI, the Public Bike System Company, brushed off concerns that the bailout was a sign that Ottawa could face the same setback.

"The financial statement from the last year is public, posted on bixi.com ... and shows a profit of 40 per cent of what was expected from BIXI," said Ayotte. "So we are in line with the financial plan and we are very confident we'll continue to be highly profitable."

Marie Lemay, CEO of the NCC, was all smiles at the official launch at the Queen and Elgin BIXI station. She expects the mayors of Ottawa and Gatineau to be on board for committing to the service in their next budgets.

"Both mayors have told me that they would be discussing it in their budget process coming up right now, so I have every reason to think they will be on board," said Lemay.

Woman's mom fakes headache so boyfriend can go to show Onstage proposal shocks girlfriend

Winnipeg nurse Jenna Steinsvik got the surprise of her life when her firefighter boyfriend Alex Babinsky proposed to her on the last taping of the Oprah show.

"I knew he'd do something big because he's like that. He's big in everything he does," Steinsvik said on her cellphone yesterday on the way home to Winnipeg from Chicago. "But, no, I never expected this."

Maid telling truth: Lawyer

▶ Hotel carpet probed for traces of semen ▶ IMF head under suicide watch ▶ New bail hearing today

The lawyer for the maid who accused IMF head Dominique Strauss-Kahn of assaulting her says he has no doubt his client is telling the truth.

"She came from a country in which poor people had little or no justice, and she's now in a country where the poor have the same rights as do the rich and the powerful," lawyer Jeffrey Shapiro said.

The 32-year-old maid from Guinea says Strauss-Kahn tried to rape her in the penthouse suite of New York's Sofitel Hotel.

Strauss-Kahn remained jailed under a suicide watch yesterday.

Forget the 'ick factor,' this cancer test can save you

Incidence and death rates for most cancers have stabilized or fallen, Canadian statistics show.

But officials are stepping up a call for the 50-plus crowd to test for one form of cancer in particular in the privacy of their own bathrooms.

"We're starting to win the war with colorectal cancer," said Dr. Jeff Sisler, working at Cancer Care Manitoba in Winnipeg.

The fecal occult blood test and the fecal immunochemical test involve sending a tiny sample of stool to a lab, where technicians can detect trace amounts of blood — a possible sign of colorectal cancer.

Sisler acknowledged the "ick factor" but said the test only needs to be done once every two years, and is not onerous.

Some facts and figures from Canadian Cancer Statistics 2011:

- An estimated 177,800 new cases of cancer will be diagnosed in Canada in 2011.
- An estimated 75,000 deaths from cancer are expected in 2011.
- Prostate cancer is the most commonly diagnosed cancer in men, with an estimated 25,500 diagnoses this year. About 4,100 men will die from the disease.
- An estimated 23,400 Canadian women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and about 5,100 will diefrom it.
- Lung cancer is the leading cause of cancer death.

Halifax unveils museum exhibit on gay seafarers

Author Jo Stanley dove into a drag queen's closet yesterday, pulling out ball gowns and feather boas.

Stanley, from Halifax, England, led the media on a tour of a new exhibit at the Maritime Museum in Halifax. It's called Hello Sailor! Gay Life on the Ocean Wave.

Museum curator Dan Conlin said there has been little resistance to the exhibit.

"One chief petty officer said everybody knew there were gay sailors in the navy and nobody ever talked about it, so hats off to you for being brave enough to explore it."

The exhibit is based on the book Stanley co-authored on the history of gay British mariners. But before bringing the exhibit to Halifax, two oralhistory researchers recorded the stories of five local gay sailors — including Frank Letourneau.

He had been in the navy for 13 years when he was forced to resign.

"I was up against a regulation that said if you're gay, you can't be in the forces," Letourneau said. The Canadian Forces changed this policy in 1992.

McDonald's says it is proud of the food it offers and that Ronald teaches children to be active.

Critics say it's time to hang up the yellow jumper. A group called Corporate Accountability International plans to ask Ronald to retire at the company's annual meeting today. They say Ronald encourages kids to eat junk food, contributing to a rise in childhood obesity and related diseases such as diabetes.

The group, which campaigned against the Joe Camel cigarette mascot in the 1990s and complained about Ronald as a role model at McDonald's annual meeting last year, has stepped up its campaign.

It took out full-page ads yesterday in the Chicago Sun-Times, New York Metro and four other papers to call for his head.

KEEP YOUR PANTS ON, IT'S ONLY A RACE

HE SAYS ...

JOHN MAZEROLLE METRO

If you're looking for a new challenge and have the opportunity to run a marathon, I would definitely, if I were you, run in the other direction as fast as you can.

That's the only running I'll recommend, though,

Before you get any ideas about "healthy living," keep in mind where the marathon originated: According to Greek legend, passed down by generations of Wikipedia writers, Pheidippides (or Dippy, as his friends called him) ran from a battle to faraway Marathon, cleverly keeping his bearings by staying to the right of numerous orange traffic cones.

Powered only by steely determination and Gatorade tables every three kilometres, Dippy ran without

"So I speak from experience when I say that if vou want to run a long race, you should find something more fun to do, such as unnecessary dental surgery."

stopping because, as classical paintings depicting the event illustrate, he wasn't wearing pants. Arriving in Marathon and conveying his final, brave message to his superiors ("They've taken our pants!"), he collapsed and died.

I can confirm the validity of this Marathon legend, too, because I just ran a half-marathon four days ago and I'm definitely halfdead.

So I speak from experience when I say that if you want to run a long race, you should find something more fun to do, such as unnecessary dental surgery. The Marathon legend actually understates the difficulties, because it leaves out when Pheidippides' skipped beers with his friends on the weekend because he had to train.

My point is that if you take part in a marathon, you are signing up for an event that killed its first participant. It would be like registering for the annual Titanic Ship Race and Iceberg Avoidance Festival.

So I'm begging you not to make the same mistakes I made. I started six years ago, with a full marathon, which is exactly 26 miles, or 7,500 kilometres. It was beyond difficult and only with the finish line in sight did I surge ahead, passing a woman in her late 60s who, judging by her facial expression, may not have been entirely aware she was in a race.

So I finished second-to-last, yet I still enjoyed myself and have been referred to since as The Penultimate Warrior — at least when I'm looking in the mirror and no one else is around.

And therein lies the problem with running. Here I am complaining about it, but I CAN'T STOP. It's a gruelling, painful, sometimes demoralizing experience and, yet, there's something when you're running that tells you it's one of the best things you've ever done.

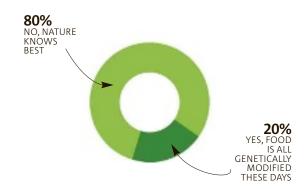

And if you start, well, I can't be held responsible for what happens. Keep a close watch on your pants.

SAO PAULO, Brazil. A 114year-old Brazilian woman is the world's oldest living human, Guinness World Records said yesterday.

Maria Gomes Valentim attributes her longevity to eating a daily roll of bread for breakfast along with fruit though she indulges in the occasional nip of Guinness said Valentim, aged 114 years 313 days, is 48 days older than the person previously considered the world's oldest human, Besse Cooper from Monroe, Ga.

Cooper now holds the title of the oldest living North American.

Guinness verified that Valentim was born July 9, 1896, in Carangola in the southeastern state of Minas Gerais, where she has always lived.

Known as Grandma Quita, Valentim's family says she has a stubborn streak and has always made a habit of minding her own business.

Guinness said it has received several claims for potential "super centenarians" — but none before were ratified because of a lack of evidence or documentation. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

An artist in sheep's clothing?

An artist known for his large-scale projects says his proposal to put silvery, luminous fabric panels over the Arkansas River won't hurt bighorn sheep.

The panels in Christo's project would span eight sections along a 64kilometre stretch of the river between Salida, Colo., and Canon City and require drilling anchors. The project is expected to take two years.

Colorado wildlife commissioners voted to send a letter to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management expressing concerns over how the project would affect the sheep, according to the Pueblo Chieftain.

Christo says protecting wildlife and the environment is important and he will address the concerns that were raised.

His ideas have hit resistance before.

The Gates in New York's Central Park was rejected by three city administrations before Christo's friend Michael Bloomberg was elected mayor. The 7,503 fabric panels of The Gates were installed in 2005 under Bloomberg's tenure.

This weekend, some of Ottawa's best talent will be on display in a very unique way — a rock lottery.

How does it work? There will be a total of 25 musicians playing in the Ottawa Rock Lottery, all from different musical backgrounds and genres. Those 25 will then be divided into five groups of five.

"A lot of them have never met before," says event organizer Samantha Everts. "So, it could be chaotic but that's part of the charm."

And, Everts says, finding the right blend of bands for the event was a

Final farewells

♦ Hollywood's biggest stars, 13,000 fans come to Chicago to say goodbye to Oprah

Oprah Winfrey wiped away tears as celebrity after celebrity surprised her during a farewell double-episode taping of The Oprah Winfrey Show that will precede her finale.

"Thank you is not enough, but thank you," Winfrey told the crowd of 13,000 gathered at Chicago's United Center on Tuesday night for Surprise Oprah! A Farewell Spectacular. "For your love and your support, thank you."

The crowd gave Winfrey a standing ovation when she first walked on the stage. Then the stars came out, with Winfrey's producers making good on their promise of the biggest celebrities of movies, music and television.

Aretha Franklin sang Amazing Grace. Tom Hanks acted as host for the evening. Michael Jordan, who led the Chicago Bulls to six NBA championships during the 1990s, told Winfrey she inspires him.

Tom Cruise, famous for his couch jumping on Winfrey's show, was there. Jerry Seinfeld wore a tuxedo to give a comedy routine. And Madonna said she is among the millions of people who "It really does amaze me that I get to be around a woman who changes people's lives every day and who also takes her own lunch to work."

'I've got to do something different': Baldwin

In a recent episode of 30 Rock, Alec Baldwin's character, Jack Donaghy, went through a kind of midlife crises, splitting into four alternate versions of his self.

One, "sideways Jack," chastised Donaghy for allowing an intended sixmonth stop in TV to turn into five years, leaving him stalled and no longer a "shark."

"You don't even know what a shark is anymore!" exclaimed the alternate Donaghy.

The episode played artfully with Baldwin's own career ambitions, which didn't include sitcom stardom until Tina Fey's 30 Rock came along.

Now, though, Baldwin is contemplating his exit from 30 Rock. He has one season left on his contract with NBC and has said he will leave at that point.

"That's pretty much all I think about right now," said Baldwin in a recent interview.

"To finish the show, I'm going to do this year then start thinking about what I want to do next. It's the big question. It's been a great experience, and I've loved doing the show. It changed my life. I'll never have it this good again, I know that. But I know that I've got to do something different, try something different. I don't know what that's going to be."

Though Baldwin, 53, worked primarily in movies before 30 Rock and has since worked in such films as 2009's It's Complicated, he says he won't necessarily return to that path.

"When I go back into the world to go to work, I don't know how likely I would be to (make movies). This is something I can't answer now," says Baldwin.

"But if I want to do something after that, I don't know if that would be another series on television — I doubt I would do that. Just to go to work, maybe I would do films again. But it's difficult because films are hard"

Brown rakes in BET Award nominations

R&B singer gets six nods, while rapper Lil Wayne earns five of his own

Last year at the BET Awards, Chris Brown performed an emotional tribute to Michael Jackson. It marked the beginning of a comeback for the embattled pop star.

This year, Brown is the top contender at the award show with six nominations.

Brown is up for best male R&B artist, viewer's choice and video of the year for Look at Me Now. He's nominated twice in the best collaboration category for his No. 1 R&B hits Deuces, featuring Tyga and Kevin McCall, and Look at Me Now, with Busta Rhymes and Lil Wayne. Brown is also nominated for best actor for his role in the heist thriller Takers.

Lil Wayne follows Brown with five nominations. Three of Lil Wayne's nominations come from his guest appearance on Brown's Look at me Now; Lil Wayne is also up for best male hip-hop artist and viewer's choice for 6 Foot 7 Kanye West, Drake and Rihanna are up for four awards each.

Other nominees for video of the year include Willow Smith' s Whip My Hair, West's Runaway, B.o.B' s Airplanes, Keri Hilson's Pretty Girl Rock and Marsha Ambrosius' Far Away. Willow is also up for best new artist and the YoungStars award. Nicki Minaj, Bruno Mars, Trey Songz, Cee Lo Green and B.o.B also received multiple nominations. Alicia Keys will perform and comedian Kevin Hart will host the award show. It airs live on June 26 from the Shrine Auditorium in Los Angeles. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Green says he has no plans of leaving his band Alexisonfire

Dallas Green says that despite his burgeoning solo career, he still sees himself returning to sing for Alexisonfire eventually.

"Yeah, I mean, that's kind of always how we've been," Green said Tuesday during an interview.

"(It's) just sort of back and forth, and we all take breaks and do our own thing, and sort of revisit (Alexisonfire). And as long as the ideas are there, then we'll continue, you know?"

Green is set to release Little Hell — his third album under the name City and Colour — on June 7.

Each of his first two solo records were certified platinum in Canada, and Green now appears poised for an international breakthrough as well. He just recently headlined a gig at London's storied Royal Albert Hall and has been included in the lineup for several major U.S. summer festivals, including Lollapalooza, Austin City Limits and the Sasquatch Festival.

Alexisonfire's last album was 2009's gold-selling Old Crows/Young Cardinals.

Green says he's still committed to continuing to sing for Alexisonfire, but does he foresee a time when he'll have to put the project aside to focus on his solo work?

'Big swings' in store for ABC next season

Network introducing 13 new series

Fairy tale figures, 1960s era stewardesses and men who dress up as women to get a job are featured in 13 new television series that ABC is introducing next season, along with proven performers Tim Allen and Charlie's Angels.

With familiar hits like Grey's Anatomy and Desperate Housewives aging, new ABC Entertainment President Paul Lee said he looked for a mix of ambition and comfort in the first new season schedule he presented to advertisers on Tuesday.

"I think we have a lot of big swings," Lee said.

Sunday may be his boldest step. Lee shifted Extreme Makeover: Home Edition to Fridays to present three dramas that all inhabit unique worlds. Two are new and Desperate Housewives is returning.

Once Upon a Time will draw comparisons to Lost with its mixture of real and imaginary worlds, and is from two producers who worked on that series. The new one is based on a 10year-old boy who believes his mother is Snow White and Prince Charming's missing daughter.

Pan Am evokes Mad Men as a sexy throwback to the 1960s, with stewardesses and pilots replacing ad executives.

They're a great opportunity to enjoy the outdoors, and cleanup is a breeze. Whether at your folks' or friends' place, on your condo's rooftop or in your own backyard, a pool party is sure to be a happy addition to your summer calen-

The key is to create a casual vibe — we're not just talking bikinis and beach balls here. A menu of miniapps and refreshing drinks served on bar-height tables will create a relaxed atmosphere and encourage guests to mix and mingle.

It's also a good idea to keep the food options varied: Offer a mixture of lighter items, such as antipasti or salads, alongside more substantial dishes mini-burgers or maple-Dijon scallops so that guests can decide for themselves when and how much they'd like to eat. Bite-size appetizers will entice guests to branch out and try something new.

When it comes to drinks, fruity cocktails are a poolside must, of course, but be sure to provide your guests with

For cocktails, serve margaritas, martinis and pear-vodsnow cones. For hors d'oeuvres, offer blue cheese burgers, individual Caesar salads served in Parmesan baskets, Asian lettuce wraps, maple-Dijon scallops, feta and watermelon skewers, and provolone-stuffed sun-dried tomatoes. And for dessert, try cherries jubilee.

Ed's drink tips

• Repurpose your existing accesoutdoor sories as ice buckets to keep bottled water, wine and beer cold and accessible to your guests. Planters, a fountain, an outdoor fireplace or a wheelbarrow are all fair game. Be creative and think outside the bucket!

• Set up themed drink stations, each stocked with a different beverage. Offer a selection of wines at one, frozen drinks at another and pitchers of martinis non-alcoholic and/or punch at another. Your guests will stay refreshed and out of the kitchen.

So you've secured the pool and that's half the battle. But don't stop there. With a few simple decor ideas, you'll find yourself in a sophisticated backyard oasis.

First step: Stash the noodles and inner tubes in the shed and turn your pool into an instant water feature using sprinklers. Their spray will sparkle in the sunshine, create interesting patterns in the pool's water and fill the air

Light the night sky — safely

The safest way to enjoy fireworks this May 24th weekend is to enjoy a public fireworks show. At the same time, "we know people are going to same time, "we know people are going to deal with fireworks and we want to make sure they're doing so safely," says Valerie Powell, a spokesperson for the Canada Safety Council.

"From a safety perspective, we recommend people not discharge fireworks at home, but we know not everybody will adhere to that." GETTY IMAGES

If you do decide to have your own fireworks display, here are some safety tips:

- Don't smoke near fireworks.
- Set up your display in an open, level space away from spectators (check that the wind is blowing away from spectators).
- Ensure that you have a bucket of water, a pail of sand and a fire extinguisher with you, as well as a cellphone in case you need to call 911.
- Don't give sparklers to children under eight. Sparklers burn extremely hot and are usually shaken or moved around a lot, so the potential for burns and accidents is greater.

Rice pilaf doesn't have to come from a box

Make this simple dish using basmati rice, cranberries and almonds

Most people know rice pilaf as a side dish that comes from a box. But it can be so much more.

This speedy recipe for cranberry almond rice pilaf can be on the table in about 25 minutes.

Don't like almonds? Use chopped cashews or pistachios. Dried currants, cherries or golden raisins can sub in for cranberries.

And while we keep the seasonings simple with just a bit of cinnamon, cumin and black pepper, feel free to take this in any direction you like.

Preparation:

- In saucepan over high heat, combine rice, orzo and broth. Bring to boil, cover, reduce heat to simmer and cook for 10 minutes. Once rice has cooked, quickly stir in cranberries, then cover and set aside for another 5 minutes, stirring occasionally.
- While rice and cranberries sit off the heat, prepare the rest of the pilaf. In a large skillet over medium heat, melt butter. Add cinnamon, ground cumin and 1 ml (1/4 tsp) black pepper, then cook for 30 seconds. Add onion and sauté until it begins to soften, about 4 minutes. Add sliced almonds and grated carrots, then cook for another 2 minutes.

Add rice and cranberries to skillet: toss well. Season with salt and pepper, then mix in chopped scallions. Serve imme-

The Curd on the Street

What do you get when you cross a buffalo with a sheep? Answer: not a Shuffalo, but Finchthaler, Ottawa's newest cheese scene addition by Canreg Station Farm and Pasture Dairy. My cheese pick this week is a welcome treat, named for the style of cheese (after famous Emmentaler, or popu-North American "Swiss") and its native home in the village of Finch, Ontario.

Finchthaler is a unique, raw, mixed sheep and buffalo milk cheese. A rich terracotta rind covers a deep yellow open paste completely covered in small eyes (pinholes). Enjoy sweet and fruity aromas with rich, tangy, nutty and buttery flavours that linger unexpectedly on your palate (a characteristic of raw milk cheeses). Beautifully golden and crusty when broiled, make it your next "au gratin" topping or melt it on BBQ burgers!

Ottawa's Latest Lager

● Named after the artificially-created waterfalls on the Rideau River, HogsBack Brewing Company is still looking for a local home to brew HogsBack Vintage Lager ● Owned and operated by four beer-loving guys

Of the many Ottawa stories that begin with, "It all started over a beer," theirs has to be one of the most interesting. When old friends – Frank, Jerry, Mark and Paige - were enjoying some pints after work, they saw the happiness that the patrons in a local brewpub were enjoying and their conversation wandered into the "we could do this" territory. Deciding to go into the Craft Beer business is step one, and where most stories end. But these longtime co-workers did their due diligence. Long hours of researching beer styles, financial models, glassware, distribution and logistics all came before they even began to delve into local history to find a name and image that's recognizable and represents the region and their beer well. One of the guys brought in a picture of a prize-winning hog, which led them to the name "HogsBack" after the area's beautiful Hog's Back Falls. Their research led to Ottawa's first permanent settler Philemon Wright and his entrepreneurial spirit as a role model for the long road ahead - not just for overcoming a silly name, but also for rising to every challenge that came brewing out of the Cool Beer Brewery in Toronto and searching for a home. HogsBack Vintage Lager is available at more than 40 establishments in and around the Ottawa area, the LCBO, and is proudly pouring at the Canadian Tulip Festival. The guys are not rushing into things. Slow and steady is perfect for enjoying a pint.

So after more than a year the boys are still contract

The beer is a golden honey colour with a firm white head. A nose of grainy cereals and grass with hints of sweet malts compliments a well carbonated flavourful and accessible lager taste that is slightly creamynicely balancing caramel malts and a slightly dry hop bitter finish. Delicious.

It's Getting Hot in Here

It's getting hot out but before you reach for the sugar-loaded ice-cream drumstick, try a healthier and way more delicious option that will actually come to vou. Ottawa's Icicle Treats offer home-made popsicles from the freshest, highest quality ingredients (using organic and local as much as possible). With more than 20 tasty original flavours, like peach-basil, champagne-raspberry, blueberry-lemonade, mangoginger and watermelonlime, there's something refreshing for each family member. You can find Icicle Treats in the market and at various festivals around the city this summer. SAMANTHA EVERTS

A room fit for a Teenager

Spending selectively now may just carry your child through the college years and beyond, says design guru Nate Berkus.

That cute duckie wallpaper or nautical furniture set were great for your child's baby years and just barely tolerable through elementary school, but a bedroom makeover is hard to get around when a child heads for the tumultuous teens.

Consider the four Cs — classic, comfort, cool and colour — when providing older kids with long-lasting lairs, er, lovely hangoutstudy spaces. And keep in mind a transformation doesn't have to mean tossing everything and buying all new.

Making a teen a partner in the redesign can be fun and fruitful, said Jennifer Adams Meyers, an interior and home products designer in Scottsdale, Ariz. "Let them have complete leeway. It gives them the motivation to keep it clean and organized."

Furnishings

A completely new set of furniture is probably not necessary, but a few items might be — a bigger bed, for instance.

Bedside tables can be painted rather than tossed — and even double as desks, said Meyers. A lamp can be made new with a funky new fabric shade, and many home improvement stores carry beaded chandeliers in a variety of colours.

Colour

There's no better way to let a tween or teen take control of their space than putting them in charge of palette, but be prepared to accept whatever crazy colour scheme they come up with.

Meyers suggested vinyl wall decals with quotes or special words ("Peace" or "Happiness") as a way for a teen to personalize the room.

Closets, shelves and containers

Big kids may be more attached than you think but too embarrassed to say that they'd like to display some of their growing-up stuff.

In the new room, that baby chair collecting dust in the corner might be more palatable with fresh paint covering the bears or ducks. The piece is saved but the nerd quotient diminished.

You know all those baskets and containers that caught the toys and baby books? Replace them with vertical book storage, graduating storage boxes than can be piled into a pyramid, or collapsible crates with handles that come in fun teen patterns and colours.

Mirror, mirror

Don't forget to mount a full-length mirror on the back of a closet door, says Nate Berkus.

It's a cheap, easy way to more quickly extract a teen girl from a bathroom.

Hardening won't be that hard

• It's time to move those seedlings outside for planting • Here is how you can make it pretty painless

DIY IDEAS

The May long weekend usually signals it's time to move seedlings that have been growing indoors outside into planters and gardens.

This process is called transplanting. Before transplanting, it is wise to harden your plants to ensure they take to their new environment. DIY Network Canada's Desperate Landscapes (weekdays at 8:30 p.m. ET/5:30 p.m. PT) offers a guide to hardening and transplanting.

Harden Up

Seedlings that were grown indoors under artificial light or on a window sill need to be acclimatized to the outdoors to ensure they continue to thrive in their new, harsher conditions.

This process is called hardening and is very simple. After the last frost, begin to place your seedlings outdoors for two to three hours at a time during the day.

Place them in a shady area that is protected from wind. Continue this for three days. After the third day, leave the plants outside for longer periods of time gradually building up to 10 hours. By day seven, seedlings can receive direct sunlight. Remember to bring them indoors every night. After two weeks, the seedlings are ready to be transplanted.

Transplant Away

Transplanting should be done on a cloudy day in the late afternoon to give the plants time to adjust to their new environment.

Also, consider bringing the container with the seedlings outside to the new pot or garden so the soil-to-soil move happens quickly. When ready to transplant, locate the root of the seedling. If grown in a container, the seedlings are likely to have formed a root ball. Break apart the root ball as gently as possible to avoid root damage. Lightly watering the soil can assist this process.

Dig a hole in the new pot or garden that is deep enough to contain the plant's roots. Transfer the seedlings to the hole and pack the soil around the roots, leaving the soil loose near the top and water.

Scented dame's are intoxicating

- ▶ In the wild or in a garden, pretty▶ Scented dame's rocket has power
- Dame's rocket is now blanketing the dappled shade of woodlands and road-sides with its white, mauve or purple flowers. Its sweet scent is especially pervasive on late spring and early summer evenings.

You might think dame's rocket (Hesperis matronalis) is a native plant; it can be seen, after all, in Quebec, in Georgia, in almost any state. But dame's rocket is a native of Europe and western Asia that early on was cultivated in American gardens, then escaped to find a happy home in the wilds of eastern North America.

FAMILY ASSOCIATIONS

Dame's rocket also might be mistaken for phlox. Both have sweetly scented flowers in similar shapes and colours, and the flowers of both plants are held clustered atop 60- or 90centimetre-high stalks. Look more closely, though, and you'll find that phlox flower parts are in fives. Dame's rocket, in contrast, has four petals. And they are in the shape of a cross, which is a giveaway for members of the cabbage

That cabbage association is how the "rocket" got into the name. Many cabbage relatives have this in their name; it's derived from the Latin "eruca" for cabbage-like plants. The now familiar vegetable arugula — also cabbage kin — has also been called rucola or rocket. And if you think it odd that a relative of cabbage should have a sweet scent, take a whiff of sweet alyssum.

AN OLD-FASHIONED FLOWER

Dame's rocket has a lot going for it. Besides being pretty and scented, the flowers bloom for weeks. Judging from where the plants have happily settled, they obviously tolerate cold and shade. They

Getting started

There are a few ways to get dame's rocket into your flower garden.

- Buy them Plants or seeds are sometimes available commercially. If you ever do come across plants of one of those double-flowered dame's rockets, the way to multiply them is by taking cuttings.
- Find them Wild plants obviously make abundant seed every year, so why not mark a few outstanding plants and collect seed from them?
- Transplant Another possible way to get started with dame's rocket is to transplant just a few wild plants into the garden, then coddle them for a couple of weeks with water and extra shade until roots settle.

even tolerate dry shade, with some sacrifice to how long they bloom. And pests? None to speak of.

Dame's rocket was once a popular garden plant.

Perhaps it is now so rarely cultivated because it is so abundant in the wild. Also, dame's rocket is a biennial: Individual plants grow leaves their first year, flower the second, then die. What nursery would sell a plant almost guaranteed to die at the end of its second year?

Being a biennial should not discredit dame's rocket, though, because it is also self-seeding. A planting eventually develops an ongoing population. The only glitch is if you start with dame's rockets having double flowers.

Seedlings of these double-flowered sorts revert to single forms, so your planting would flower every year, but the flowers would eventually all be single.

Why not try outdoor

"It gives a more industrial look and it's also less expensive than an interior light source," Lohnes.

MIRRORS

Replace your plate glass mirror with a tall vertical mirror.

"Then put your light fixture on top of that and vou create almost a focal point," says Lohnes. Or buy a mirror framed by a mirror. "It's a cool look and can dress up a bathroom," says Turco.

Instead of installing a storebought vanity, think about a floating vanity. "Have a contractor do a floating vanity top and then tile it or cover it with stone. It's often really inexpensive to do," says Lohnes. Or Turco suggests just switching out your faucet. "Single lever faucets are a huge trend and they are typically more contemporary," he notes.

♠ Manitoba won't subsidize but will help try to score Winnipeg NHL team: Premier Manitoba taxpayers won't subsidize an NHL team in Winnipeg but the province will consider everything else in its power to score the return of professional hockey, Premier Greg Selinger said yesterday.

He said the province isn't involved with the negotiations between True North Sports and Entertainment Ltd. and the Atlanta Thrashers. But provincial officials have been in constant contact with the True North team for over a year about the possibility of bringing a team back to the city, Selinger said.

"We have no interest as a provincial government in supporting the operations of a hockey team," Selinger said.

He then added that doesn't mean Manitoba can't make the city a desirable place for the Thrashers. The province could help with any renovations that might need to be done to the downtown MTS Centre to support a team, he said.

"We will work closely with them to ensure there can be success in Manitoba," he said. "I'm very optimistic that we can support an NHL franchise. I'm excited about the possibility of it coming to Manitoba and, if it comes, it will be a success."

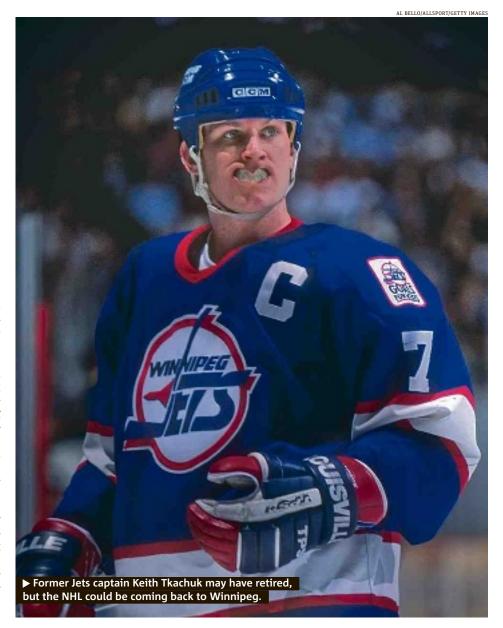

PREMIER GREG SELINGER

"They'll look after the NHL franchise. If we can do more to support the building, serving a strong public role, we'll consider that."

Winnipeg lost its beloved Jets in 1996 when the team moved to Phoenix because of financial problems. Since then, Winnipeg has built a new arena the MTS Centre — and has argued it can support an NHL franchise once again.

Rumours of a team returning to Winnipeg have been rampant since the team departed and many are skeptical about the latest reports. But excitement is also growing with some fans already debating online over what the prospective team should be called.

Thunder coach at a loss after Nowitzki's brilliant Game 1

Over his 14 seasons in the NBA, Dirk Nowitzki says he's seen pretty much every defence possible. Well, Thunder coach

Well, Thunder coach Scott Brooks is tempted to try the ultimate gamble the invisible defender.

That's right, nobody. Maybe just someone shouting, "Boo!" or "Don't miss!" whenever Nowitzki loads up to shoot in Game 2 of the Western Conference final tonight.

Brooks surely was joking yesterday when he suggested not guarding Nowitzki. He was still awed and frustrated after the big German made 12-of-15 field goals and set a playoff record by hitting all 24 of his free throws on his way to 48 points in Game 1, the most by anyone this post-season

"There were nine shots that he made, no matter what you did, you couldn't have guarded him any better," Brooks said. "We put everybody on him. We tried to take it out of his hands. The only thing we didn't do was not guard him.

"Maybe tomorrow night, if we want to do something different, we don't challenge him. We play a zone and let him go free."

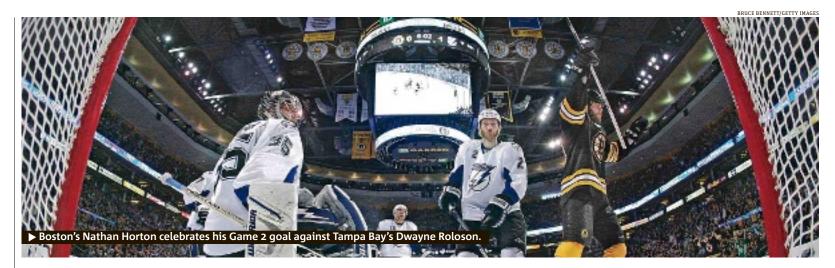

Nowitzki simply had one of those nights superstars have.

He figures the Thunder will try something different in Game 2.

"I'm going to try to attack like I always do," he said. "If it's not there, I can swing it, pick and roll. We've got a lot of options out there. We have a deep bench. So I don't feel the pressure to force shots, and that's the good thing about this team."

Because Nowitzki had such a historic game, it's easier for the Thunder to find some positives, starting with them keeping things close to the end. If they can do that, they can turn to Kevin Durant, whose 40 points were overshadowed by Nowitzki in Game 1, to try to turn the tide of the series.

Poor play can't dim Tiger's star power

For his golf, Tiger Woods is about to fall out of the top 10 in the world for the first time in 14 years. For his star power, he still ranks ahead of any other athlete.

Woods, whose last win came 18 months ago at the Australian Masters, will drop to at least No. 11 in the next world ranking published Monday. It will be the first time he is out of the top 10 since he was No. 13 April 6, 1997, the week before he won the Masters for the first time.

Forbes, meanwhile, says he is still the No. 1 celebrity in the sports world.

Woods checks in at No. 6 on Forbes' annual "Celebrity 100" list of the most powerful people or groups in the entertainment business. Lady Gaga tops the overall rankings, followed by Oprah Winfrey, Justin Bieber, U2 and Elton John.

Miami Heat star LeBron James is the second-ranked athlete behind Woods at No. 10. Kobe Bryant of the Los Angeles Lakers is 14th. Forbes estimated Woods' total earnings last year to be $75 million US, making him the highest-paid athlete. The magazine put Bryant's earnings for the last 12 months at $53 million, followed by James at $48 million and four-time major winner Phil Mickelson at $47 million.

Woods started the year at No. 2 and has been steadily dropping points. He tied for fourth at the Masters last month, but withdrew from The Players Championship last week because of injuries. He said on his website Monday that he will try to return in June for the U.S. Open.

Breaking through the wall

Top goalies in Boston and Tampa have looked ordinary in East final

Boston and Tampa Bay have played a pair of surprisingly high-scoring games and the trend might continue the way the Eastern Conference final is going.

The series is tied 1-1 and the teams have combined for 18 goals.

That kind of offence seemed unlikely heading into the matchup featuring the top-two playoff goalies this season. Tampa Bay's Dwayne Roloson and Boston's Tim Thomas both allowed an average of two goals per game through the opening two playoff rounds.

"They're all-star players, and they're players that are top-notch players in the league," Roloson said yesterday.

"The guys we have on our team and the guys they have on their team, there's going to be times when you can't contain them. They're gifted players, so they're going to take advantage of the chances that they get."

Lightning centre Steven

Stamkos agrees.

"You got two teams that know how to score goals," he said. "I think both teams would agree that it was, some of the goals you'd like to have back as a team, and by no means was there real-

Unlikely snipers

If scoring continues to come from unexpected players, the big numbers will continue for both the Bruins and the Lightning in Game 3 in Tampa tonight.

- Boston rookie Tyler Seguin has three goals and three assists in the series. The No.
 pick in last year's draft didn't play in Boston's first two series.
- Lightning third-liner Sean Bergenheim has eight goals in 13 playoff games, after scoring only 14 in 80 regular-season games.

ly any fault on the goal-tenders."

Still, Roloson made a number of outstanding saves during Tampa Bay's Game 1 victory, while Thomas came up big late in Boston's 6-5 win in the second game Tuesday night.

"I saw him in the third, the last five, six minutes we had a lot of grade-A chances," Lightning captain Vincent Lecavalier said of Thomas. "He gave them the win there the last five minutes. We really felt we would tie it up, and we were getting our chances, but he made some huge saves."
